Edgar backs $86 million IBHE request

AMY CARNES
Administration editor

Gov. Jim Edgar announced Tuesday he will support the Illinois Board of Higher Education's recommended $86.4 million increase for the state's 12 public universities, marking the first time a Governor has fully funded the board's request.

The governor unveiled his 1994-95 higher education budget at a meeting of the state board in Chicago. He will outline his proposed fiscal year 1995 budget in its entirety before a joint session of the Illinois General Assembly Wednesday.

"(It (the funding) recognizes the unique effort by our state universities and colleges during the last two years to assure the money we have been sending them is spent wisely and productively," Edgar said.

Edgar's budget includes a $55.2 million operating budget for Eastern — a $1.8 million or 3.5 percent increase from 1993-94 appropriations.

Board of Governors spokeswoman Michelle Brazell said the BOG was stunned but pleased by the Governor's announcement.

"If these numbers make it through the General Assembly to final appropriations, we will have a very good year," Brazell said.

The General Assembly has the option to approve, amend or change the Governor's budget before the end of June. The new fiscal year begins July 1.

Laurent Gosselin, local chapter president of Eastern's teacher's union, called the Governor's message "conventional election year rhetoric."

"If (the budget) turns out to be real concrete support for universities and faculty, I'll find it encouraging," Gosselin said. "Problems with university funding are so extreme that a reasonable year now and then isn't going to be sufficient."

Edgar backed the IBHE's recommendation that $2 million in financial incentives be split among seven of the 12 state universities for compliance with the board's Priorities, Quality and Productivity initiative. However, Eastern was not one of the schools slated to receive a bonus.

The PQP initiative, which was started by the IBHE in October 1991, is a program geared at cutting wasteful spending at the 12 state universities. It asks universities to cut costs in small, low-priority programs and reapply the money to more popular, high-enrollment programs.

WEIU-TV to begin new format

By ANDY PURCELL
Campus editor

WEIU-TV's Mid-Illinois News Scan will begin operating Monday under a new format that will rotate the newscast's location and staff and allow the opportunity for more live broadcasts.

The new format, finalized on Tuesday, will be anchored by students five days a week, with four taped broadcasts and one live broadcast, said Hal Wilson, WEIU's station manager. Eventually students may be allowed to produce a live newscast on all five days, with administrative approval.

In the beginning, four programs will be taped but treated as if they were live.

Programs will be produced for two weeks by the students from the WEIU-TV studio in the Buzzard Building. Then for one week, programs will be taped from the Journal Gazette newsroom in Mattoon using the Mid-Illinois Newspaper staff as anchors.

The new format is the result of compromise between WEIU administrators and students after students submitted a memo last month expressing their dissatisfaction with the program being taped at the Mattoon Journal Gazette with editors and reporters of the Mid-Illinois Newspapers serving as anchors.

Patty Culhane, spokeswoman for the students, said she is happy students will be returning to live production and was optimistic students will be able to return to five-time-a-week live production.

"They said if we can do it, and I truly believe we can, we can go live five times a week," Culhane said. "I'm excited about it, I really am."

Culhane admitted it will take some time to get

Illinois blacks, men take longer to graduate

Editor's note: For decades, a bachelor's degree has been thought of as a four-year proposition. Recent figures show, however, that the average time needed to earn an undergraduate diploma has edged closer to five years. The following is the second in a two-part series examining the trend.

By BRIAN HUCHEL
Staff writer

Eastern's graduation data supports a recent Illinois Board of Higher Education study showing that blacks and men take longer to earn their undergraduate degrees than whites and women.

The IBHE study covered the graduation of students who had enrolled as freshmen from

A recent study shows that the average length of time it takes to earn an undergraduate degree depends on race and sex and the situation.

1980-87 at 10 of Illinois' 12 public universities. It concluded that white and black males take longer to earn an undergraduate degree than their female counterparts.

According to the report, nearly 52 percent of all male college students needed five or more years to graduate, compared with about 43 percent of women.

Statistics from Eastern demonstrated the same trends. According to the Office of Planning Services, white males, on average, take 4.6 years to graduate while black males take 4.7 years. White females take an average 4.3 years to graduate while black females take 4.54 years.

These statistics were compiled from spring 1990 to summer 1993.

The IBHE report indicated 78 percent of black males take at least five years to earn their degrees.

Students and higher education officials cited a myriad of social problems for the extended graduation trends. Delores Cross, president of Chicago State University, a school involved in the IBHE's study, attributes the difference to high school preparation.

man Bill Addison referred to the governor's higher education budget as "good news and bad news."

Addison said Eastern will probably benefit from the allocations the IBHE has recommended, but said he is concerned about the awarding of PQP incentives.

"The idea to provide colleges and universities with incentives for program management and quality is a good one," Addison said.

He questioned, however, the criteria involved in awarding the bonuses. He said it was not appropriate for the IBHE to penalize Eastern for not addressing specific board recommendations when the university made substantial cuts in other areas.

Edgar's expenditure will provide a $37 million boost for financial aid as well as a 3.5 percent allocation for faculty and staff pay hikes. The plan also limits tuition increases at the 12 state universities to 3 percent.

In the capital development budget, the Governor announced a 50 percent increase for higher education building projects. Included in the list of 21 projects to be funded next year is $1.75 million to complete the Buzzard Building rehabilitation project. The allocation will be used to purchase furniture, computers and audio/video equipment.

In other matters Tuesday, the IBHE:

- Approved a $50,000 cooperative work study grant for Eastern. The grant will help fund internships for undergraduate students.

- Authorized seven of the 12 state universities to offer new degree programs and opportunities in research and public service.

- Passed a resolution reaffirming the importance of international education on campuses in accordance with state legislation mandating some form of international education at all public universities.

used to producing live broadcasts again and said she is happy the dispute has finally been resolved.

"I'm sure we're going to make some mistakes - we're rusty," Culhane said. "We haven't been live for almost a year.

"I'm just glad we're going to get back to producing news. This has been a distraction we didn't need."

Harry Reynolds and Bill Lair, editors of the Journal Gazette and Times-Courier, respectively, said they are happy with the new format, but said some groups, including the faculty and student senates, had unfairly criticized the newspapers' role in the joint venture.

"After we got into this, we started getting some criticism and it didn't distinguish between the (WEIU) administration and the newspapers," Reynolds said. "I think we resented that a little bit."

Lair said: "I think one of the things that disappointed me was the lack of contact from a variety of people at Eastern as to what our role was. There were a lot of people talking about us but not to us.

"I think there were some benefits to the students which we were providing and were never heard; I think some groups overlooked those things."

Reynolds said he doesn't have any hard feelings toward the faculty and student senates but said he wished the groups would've become fully informed before they spoke out against the newspapers.

"I don't think the groups that opposed it are malicious," Reynolds said. "I think it was a matter of not having all the information."

"What is done on a pre-college basis is very important to students," Cross said. "Women are possibly focused on their education earlier than men are and better advisement could help to relieve the situation."

"It is possible to graduate in four years, but I don't see many people doing it," said fifth-year senior Eric West, an Eastern sociology major who is black. "Staying here five years is now the trend. A lot of other students I know are using an extra year to graduate."

John Coffey, an academic adviser, said the difference between male and female graduation rates may be because there are more women in higher education.

"Male study skills and ideas are not as intact during college as females are," Coffey said. "We (males) don't tend to mature fully until much later in life. We don't tend to plan very well either."

Black males don't only take longer, but also drop out more often than other demographic groups, said Johnetta Jones, director of Eastern's Minority Affairs Office.

Jones said the major reason the dropout rate was so high among blacks is the issue of "delayed gratification."

This also attributes to longer graduation rates, she said.

"A lot of blacks in college say 'If I drop out, I can get a job and have a nice car right now, rather than starving for four or five years in college," Jones said.

Cross said it should not matter how many years a student spends attending a university.

"What matters is how the student spends his time at the university," she said.

Charles Colvin, a professor of African American Studies, said several social factors dictate when, or if, black males graduate.

"In general, it takes black males longer to complete college when it comes to financial problems," Colvin said. "Not finishing college, however, has nothing to do with ability. There are other more prevalent factors such as money of family."

Primary AB cuts expected in payroll

NATALIE GOTT
Staff writer

Cuts in student payroll should be first made in the Sports and Recreation Board 1994-95 budget request, said David Dutler, director of sports and recreation.

At Tuesday's Apportionment Board meeting, Dutler said if any cuts have to be made from his requested budget, he would prefer they be made from the request of $5,566 for student payroll. Currently, more than 250 students are employed at the Recreational Sports Office. Twenty of the 250 student employees are provided by a work study program, which gets funds from the state.

The Sports and Rec Board submitted a budget request of $129,009, $127,209 of which it is requesting from student fees. The request is $1,249 more than the approved budget for this year.

"I will gamble that we will get work study people and we will cut payroll," Dutler said. "That (student payroll) is the heart of our budget."

"We pretty much have always been given money back because of work study," Dutler said. "I would like to think it will be the same for next year."

However, R. J. Wood, student chairman of the Sports and Rec Board, said the board's main concern is to make sure they get the money they have requested for a new computer system.

"The (current) computer system is ancient. It's horrible," Wood said. "They are old computers from Blair Hall. There is one nice computer that runs from the time the Rec Center opens until it closes."

The board has submitted a request of $15,500 to purchase a new computer system. Included in the new system are two laser printers, expanded memory service and a photo scanner. The new system would connect with the most modern computer at the Rec Center, forming a four computer work station.

Chuck Prince, assistant director of rec sports, said an Eastern employee researched the pricing of a computer. With the changing prices in the computer market, an exact amount of the cost cannot be made until the board knows it has the funds to purchase the system, Prince said. He added that the cost may be lower than the amount the board budgeted.

"If it comes in at $3,000 less, you have your $3,000 back," Prince said to the AB.

Liquor Task force undecided

By TRAVIS SPENCER
Staff writer

After listening to testimony at three liquor task force hearings, four liquor task force members say a recommendation to the Charleston City Council concerning the city's bar-entry age will be forthcoming.

However, all four indicated they are not yet ready to make up their minds on the issue. Two of the three students on the committee agreed the issue should be decided based on local needs.

Task force member Bobby Smith agreed with task force chairman Lou Hencken's opinion that Champaign's decision on its bar-entry age shouldn't affect the vote of any of the members.

"I never thought it would make a difference in the first place," Smith said.

Student task force member Luke

Neumann also said Champaign will have no affect on his vote.

The Charleston City Council called for the liquor hearings as a response to the City of Champaign's decision to consider raising its entry age from 19 to 21. Task force members said they feared University of Illinois students would drive to Charleston to get into bars if Champaign raises its age.

Smith said enforcement of the 21 drinking age is the main issue for Eastern students. He said the 19-and-20-year-old students want to be able to go into the bars and be respected.

Don Yost, member of the liquor task force said Charleston police need to increase their efforts against underage drinking.

"At this point I'm not convinced that just raising the entry age will stop underage people from drinking," Yost said.

Don Mapes, task force member, said he is going to stay neutral until he can sit down with his notes and look into all the options.

"I want something to go with the decision," Mapes said. "I want reasons and I want to know why we make the decision. We need to create a platform for our decision."

Smith said: "I listened to all the opinions and options of the people and now I'm ready to talk about the issues in our meetings."

Smith and Don Yost, alcohol task force member, said stepping up enforcement of the law is the bottom line. Yost said he wants the task force to come up with new ideas for enforcement.

"I see nothing wrong with unannounced uniformed officers coming into the bars and making ID checks," Yost said.

City rejects alley release petition

The Charleston City Council voted unanimously Tuesday to reject a petition filed by residents asking the city to release ownership of an alley to them because of litter and noise problems in the alley.

The rejected request asked the city to vacate its ownership of the southern half of an alley that runs north from Polk Avenue to Taylor Avenue.

However, the council assured residents who live near the alley that it would find a way to control noise and litter problems in the area — the reason why residents filed the petition. The request would have turned over control of the southern half of the alley to residents whose property abut the alley.

If the request had been approved, residents would have barricaded the alley, which had been blocked until the city removed the blockade last November. Although the city had originally placed the barricade across the alley about eight years ago, it had no legal authorization to do so, said Mayor Dan Cougill.

"We need to vacate the whole thing or address it in a different way," Cougill said.

If the entire alley is vacated, the change would cut off the driveway of Cheryl Levix, 219 Taylor, one of the residents who made the petition.

In other business, the council:

- Approved the final plan for The Fields subdivision, which is being developed west of Route 130.
- Approved a zoning variance allowing Mike Carlyle to build a one-story apartment building at 1305 18th St.
- Approved a zoning variance allowing Ron Stearns to expand his printing business at 221 Monroe Ave.

Ticket sales for Blind Melon drop after quick start

BRIAN HUCHEL
Staff writer

After the first day of ticket sales for the spring concert, more than 1,000 tickets were sold, but sales over the last three days have slowed to less than 400 tickets, said Brian Gossett, director of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

The University Ticket Office, which is located near the Sugar Shack in the Union, sold 1,138 tickets on Friday — the first day of sales. Since that time, the ticket office has sold 359 tickets: 266 on Saturday and Monday and 93 on Tuesday.

The university is selling a total of 4,000 tickets for Blind Melon's March 12 performance in Lantz Gymnasium. The university sold 4,300 tickets for each of the Bill Cosby performances during Parents Weekend.

David Milberg, director of student activities, attributed the smaller ticket sales to Blind Melon being an act requiring more room for audience movement.

"We're going to sell less tickets because of the nature of the concert," Milberg said. "(Bill) Cosby is a sit-down comedian, while Blind Melon is a lot different."

Gossett is still hoping the concert will sell-out, despite the drop in sales.

"It could be close to a sellout; it is just hard to tell at this time," Gossett said. "All the students I have talked to have been saying the concert will sell-out."

Starting today, the Union Ticket Office will also begin offering tickets to the general public for $15, while tickets are $10 for Eastern students with a valid student ID.

"I don't know how much the general public will buy," Gossett said. "We still have a few days to get a sell-out.

"I would like to have seen 50 percent of the tickets go to the Eastern students. If we are presenting an event like this for the students, I would at least like to see the better seats go to them."

Although the concert date is only 11 days away, Milberg said he has not yet received a finalized copy of the contract with Blind Melon, which is currently on tour.

Athletic director search should include us all

As the selection of Eastern's new athletic director draws closer, members of the campus community will soon have their chance to influence the selection process.

That opportunity should be exercised to its fullest advantage.

The first of the four candidates to interview for the vacant athletic director's post will be on Eastern's campus from tonight through Friday. Each of the three remaining finalists will visit Charleston for similar visits during the next two weeks.

During these visits, each candidate will be available to meet with representatives of all of the constituencies from the campus community. These meetings will provide students and administrators alike the opportunity to meet the finalists, ask them questions, gain an understanding of their various managerial styles and scrutinize their backgrounds.

With the selection of the new athletic director, Eastern will learn the identity of the individual who will likely guide the athletic department into the 21st century. That individual will be facing issues such as declining state funding, gender equity compliance, conference alignment and NCAA classification.

Various individuals and constituencies within the Eastern community would like to see these issues handled in vastly different fashions. It is likely that just as many opinions on these subjects exist among the pool of candidates still vying for the athletic director's post.

While no single individual has the power to choose the new athletic director, just as no single athletic director is likely to guide the department out of difficulty anytime soon, the selection process should not be treated lightly.

Students, members of the administration, faculty and staff should use these campus visits as an opportunity to learn more about each finalist. Beginning tonight, all those who believe they have a stake in the selection process of the new athletic director should make their voices heard.

Bleak picture of future warrants discussion

"We should all be concerned about the future because we will have to spend the rest of our lives there."

— Charles F. Kettering, 1949

If you've ever been haunted by visions of the apocalypse, don't look to David Pimentel for comfort.

He's not the lonely picket who paces the sidewalk with a sign urging passersby to brace for a fiery demise. And he doesn't call on sinners to repent before it's too late.

Pimentel, you see, has his own picture of The End, and it's at least as disturbing as the supernatural version found in Scripture. This one, however, the world will bring upon itself.

Pimentel is a Cornell University ecologist and the author of a frightening new study assessing the world population and how it relates to global resources. His report, released last week, paints an ugly scene of "absolute misery, disease and starvation" by the year 2100 if we don't put the brakes on Earth's exploding population.

Consider a few of his predictions:

- The global population will climb from its current roughly 6 billion to between 12 billion and 15 billion.
- In the United States, the population will jump from its current 250 million plus to 500 million. The U.S. standard of living would decline to slightly better than in present-day China.

• Land degradation will lead to a 20 percent drop in world food production during the next 25 years. World reserves of coal, oil, natural gas and uranium will be mostly depleted by 2100, while ground water levels drop to dangerously low levels.

The crux of Pimentel's argument comes later. He claims that in 106 years the planet will not be capable of supporting a population of more than 2 billion, one-third its population size now. The best way to do so, he says, is to limit families to "1.5" children each.

We've heard these doomsday scenarios before, but

Chris Sundheim

"It's difficult to give even curious thought to a far-off era when the human population spills outside its natural boundaries."

Pimentel's is the least forgiving sketch of the future to come out recently and is thus harder to dismiss than most.

The idea that humans are fast outpacing their environment isn't the least bit new. It usually manifests itself in the well-supported theory that most of the world's environmental and social problems are aggravated by the burgeoning population. Before we can hope to get a handle on other crises, we have to first address this most basic problem.

The most dramatic growth in population, the study reports, surprisingly will not occur in Third-World nations where official control of anything, let alone baby production, is often hard to come by.

Here arise the time-honored debates of how to govern a population. How does a government tell its people to have fewer children? And what sort of a mandate does that set ethically?

Here in the Midwest, where endless acres of land filled only with crops stretch to the horizon, it's difficult to give even curious thought to a far-off era when the human population spills outside its natural boundaries. But those expanses of farmland help form the most obvious part of Pimentel's question of resources: "food security."

This fall, several hundred of the world's scientists will put their heads together for an international conference on world population and development, marking the first meeting of its size to address the problem of overpopulation. They will probably raise a red flag and call on international leaders to make a commitment to support more and deeper studies.

Whatever recommendations the experts make, their gathering and the growing volume of population research points out the need for a frank discussion of our numbers.

Students aren't honest in opposing higher bar-entry age

Dear editor:

I have been reading for some time about the debate over whether to raise the bar-entry age from 19 to 21. I am in somewhat of a unique position in that I am both a resident of the area and an Eastern student.

From what I have read and heard, I believe the majority of Eastern students under the age of 21 who oppose raising the bar-entry age do so not because they fear there will be nothing left for them to do, but because their activity of choice is consuming alcohol. One very important point seems to go unmentioned — those students under the age of 21 should not be consuming alcohol anyway because it is illegal. In essence, the furor being raised by the students seems to be a result of their anger that the city might enact a law which would no longer facilitate this illegal activity.

Critics of my point of view will likely say they oppose raising the bar-entry age because they want a place to socialize with friends, not because they want to drink. This argument is hard for me to swallow. If students who are underage want to socialize and sincerely have no desire to drink, they can accomplish this anywhere. You don't have to be sitting in a bar to converse with friends.

Along this line, I thought it most interesting when I read the headline, "Students ask city not to up drinking age" in the Feb. 22 issue of The Daily Eastern News. This appears to mistakenly suggest that the current drinking age is 19. Regardless of what the city does, the drinking age is, and has been for many years, 21. The News appears to have missed the boat altogether on that one.

The second criticism I anticipate is that students will say there is nothing for them to do if they can't go to bars. I find this, too, to be an unrealistic argument. On campus, there is a bowling alley, an indoor swimming pool, indoor and outdoor basketball courts, various entertainment in the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union as well as periodic presentations by a number of prominent authors, comedians and other professionals. In the Mattoon and Charleston communities, there are three movie theaters showing a total of seven movies, three bowling alleys, a theatrical company and a YMCA that offers a wide variety of programs and activities.

Students could also put together house parties that don't include alcohol as easily as they seem to organize those that do. This of course assumes the students are sincere when they say the object is to socialize with friends and not to drink.

If underage students at Eastern are concerned about the city raising the entry age because they want to consume alcohol, I wish they would just say so. What seems to be lacking is a desire on the part of many students to do anything else.

Dean's list rules under scrutiny

By HEIDI KEIBLER
Staff writer

A Student Senate member is following up a resolution allowing her to examine the dean's list, hoping to have a new system that will include all students with an A average.

Member Julie Tizzard said she should have a proposal for a new dean's list in about two months. Currently, students with grade-point averages in the top 10 percent of their college are placed on the list.

Tizzard, whose resolution to reform the criteria was passed by the senate last semester, wants to include students with a 3.5 GPA or higher to the dean's list as well.

The reformed criteria would still allow the top 10 percent of students in their respective colleges to be on the dean's list, but would also include students with an A average, she said.

"The current system is not equitable," Tizzard said. "Some colleges have more departments than others and more students are competing. That makes it unfair."

Tizzard said she is not sure how many more students would be added to the dean's list if the measure was passed.

"If it's done the way I hope, it will just include the people who have an A average but have been left out," Tizzard said.

Tizzard said she plans to conduct surveys in residence halls to determine students' satisfaction with the current dean's list system.

The surveys will ask students which college they are enrolled in and if they are satisfied with the dean's list system. The surveys will then outline Tizzard's proposed system and ask students which criteria they would prefer.

"Hopefully I can get a wide sample," Tizzard said. "I want to know which colleges are most concerned with the policies."

After the surveys are tabulated, Tizzard said she will get input from faculty and deans through the Student Faculty Relations Committee, and take the proposal before the Dean's Council.

"This is a long process," said Tizzard. "Hopefully within two months it will be completed."

Tizzard said she won't know the chances of the reformed criteria passing until she talks to the Dean's Council.

"Many of the faculty could care less either way," said Tizzard. "But if there is legitimate concern, something should be done."

Even though she initially proposed the dean's list reform for personal reasons, Tizzard said she has gotten a lot of feedback from students about the plan.

"I've had a lot of students come to me with three As who aren't on dean's list," Tizzard said. "I want to make the system more equitable."

Student workers removed

Replacement caused by recycling bin neglect

By CHRISTINE STARR
Staff writer

Two students assigned to emptying recycling bins at the Lincoln, Stevenson and Douglas complex have been replaced after a building service worker commented the bins had not been emptied since last semester.

Joe Cantona, co-chairman of the National Residence Hall Honorary recycling committee, said the two group members were replaced this week. Cantona was unavailable for comment later to give the names of the students.

Recently, a building service subforeman for the Lincoln, Stevenson and Douglas complex said bins in that complex were overflowing into the hallways and building service workers were forced to throw some cans away.

Senate members on the recycling committee admitted there have been some problems.

"(The program) is still in its infancy. . .," committee member Greg Eisenpreiss said. "Sometimes people forget to make sure the bins are emptied."

The senate recycling committee is a volunteer organization comprised of senate members and other student organization members. The committee has placed 30 recycling bins in various locations on campus this semester.

Previously, aluminum recycling bins could only be found in residence halls.

Members of the NRHH are responsible for collecting cans in the residence halls.

Cantona said about 40 NRHH members are involved in aluminum recycling at residence halls.

Members alternate duties, which include emptying bins and depositing the cans at a location near Eastern's married student housing. The NRHH recycling bins are supposed to be emptied twice a week — on Mondays and Thursdays.

In a related issue, members of both recycling organizations said that while aluminum recycling has been successful on campus, there is little possibility that either group will implement a paper or plastic recycling program soon.

Jym Gregory, NRHH adviser, said money generated from the aluminum recycling program, which has been in existence for about five years, is used for housing scholarship money. However, Gregory said the NRHH is not actively petitioning for bins for paper and plastic recycling.

Increased minorities, honor students primary BOG goal

By AMY CARNES
Administration editor

Eastern's Vice President for Student Affairs Tuesday said a primary goal of enrollment management is to increase the number of minority and honor students on campus among entering freshmen and transfer students.

Vice President for Student Affairs Lou Hencken addressed the Faculty Senate Tuesday along with Jill Nilsen, special assistant to the Eastern President David Jorns and Dean of Enrollment Management Frank Hohengarten. All three serve on the Board of Governors Enrollment Management Committee.

Hohengarten said the committee provides a specific forum to exchange ideas and hear what other universities are doing to manage enrollment. He said one benefit derived from the system-wide initiative is the development of a mutual plan to enhance minority recruitment.

However, Senate member John Miller expressed concern that the board's enrollment management plan might compromise the efforts of individual universities.

Hencken said the BOG plan can help Eastern to recruit more minority students.

"There is nothing better in recruitment than a satisfied customer," Hencken said. "If you cut us, we bleed blue because of Eastern blue. We are very institutional."

Hencken said the committee has had two meetings so far this year and the next meeting is scheduled to be held by video conference in April.

In other matters, Faculty Senate executive members Bill Addison and John Miller reported on a Monday meeting they had with university administrators to discuss the length of department chairmen terms and the role of faculty consultation in the appointment process.

"It is my impression that the specifics of senate's recommendations concerning the appointment and reappointment of chairmen have been misinterpreted by a number of people in the campus community," Miller said.

Live concerts hit airwaves

By ADAM McHUGH
Activities editor

The concept of local performers playing live concerts over the radio will be realized by WEIU-FM (88.9) beginning Thursday night.

The four-part program will be broadcast from 9 to 10 p.m. in WEIU's studio in Buzzard Building, and will feature area women folk singers and bands. It is being broadcast in conjunction with Women's History and Awareness Month.

The program is an attempt to give Eastern students and Charleston residents a "taste of different kinds of music" over the radio, said Gaye Harrison, director of publicity at WEIU-TV who is helping produce the program, said the month-long series.

Two area folk singers and two local bands will be featured in the program, which was conceived last fall by a programming committee at the station, Harrison said.

"We figured that instead of sponsoring a live concert and trying to pack a bunch of people in the Rathskeller, we could gain a bigger audience over the radio," she said.

Harrison said the concert has been offered for several years at various campus locations.

"All the performers in this series are part of last year's concert, and they feel the live performance is the next best thing to having an audience," she said.

Harrison is also a member of the band Motherlode, which will perform in the series March 10.

Thursday's featured performer is Denise Switzer, a local folk singer. After Motherlode's appearance, a band that plays Celtic music will perform March 17, and vocalist Julia Rea will play March 31.

The station will not be broadcasting during the week of spring break.

Harrison said all performers slated for the concert series fit well into Women's History and Awareness Month, because all are working women who find time to perform.

"In the future we will offer series that have more local artists of all kinds, not just women, but we felt these concerts would be fitting for this month," Harrison said.

Improvement of professional image topic of presentation

By PETER MEANEY
Staff writer

Improving professional image in order to be more marketable in today's workforce is the idea behind a seminar being offered by Eastern's Counseling Center.

"Improving Your Professional Image," a Life Skills Seminar, will begin at noon today in the Arcola/Tuscola Room of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

Peggy Burthold, who conducts seminars for Mary Kay Cosmetics, will moderate the presentation.

Burthold, who has offered the seminar for several years at Eastern, said she has recently been giving the seminar for nurses at hospitals in Houston, Texas.

Burthold said she has worked with Mary Kay in providing seminars for about six years.

She said the seminars are important to people who want to make good impressions not only in job interviews, but when they are actual employees also.

"People who pay close attention to details of the way they look tend to make better employees," Burthold said.

The components of polishing an image Burthold said she will examine include taking care of your skin and "how to be a better dresser."

She will also give tips on wearing jewelry, applying makeup and talk about hosiery for men and women.

Burthold said in past seminars, she has received an overwhelming positive reply from the audience.

She added many people have called her following the seminar and discussed dressing tips and "all sorts of other things."

"The most important thing I have learned about image is that little things make a difference," Burthold said.

Local resort in legal battle

SHELBYVILLE (AP) — The legal battle over Eagle Creek resort in Shelby County shifted to U.S. Bankruptcy Court in Arizona, where new owners have sought protection from creditors.

The state Department of Conservation, which leased the land to the previous owners, and a bank representing investors trying to foreclose on the property, both contended Tuesday that the recent sale was invalid.

Both said they didn't learn of the sale to Quail Creek Associates Inc. of Phoenix until a hearing in Shelby County Circuit Court on Monday — the same day the new owners were granted protection under federal bankruptcy law in Arizona.

Under the lease agreement, the previous operators "don't have the ability to change operators and managers without our OK," said Department of Conservation spokeswoman Carol Knowles.

The mortgage and security agreement with American National Bank & Trust Co. of Chicago, which represents investors owed nearly $16.5 million, "likewise provides that the property ... is not transferable absent our permission," said bank attorney David Nelson.

American National wanted a Florida-based group appointed as the resort's interim manager during foreclosure proceedings. But an order issued in the bankruptcy case bars the state court from acting while the Chapter 11 proceedings are under way, said James Bennett, an attorney for the new owners.

The sale "is absolutely bona fide and will be upheld," Bennett said.

The Chapter 11 bankruptcy reorganization prevents the trustee or any other creditor from collecting debts from Quail Creek.

Serbian leader gives in to Russia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Under the gun from NATO and pressured by their Russian allies, Bosnian Serbs agreed Tuesday to open Tuzla airport to relief flights that could feed hundreds of thousands of civilians.

The decision to reopen the airfield was the crucial first step to beginning a relief airlift to the 800,000 people, many of them refugees, in and around the besieged Muslim city.

It was also the second major concession the Bosnian Serbs have made in as many weeks and demonstrated the results of NATO resolve to enforce U.N. resolutions. NATO jets shot down four Bosnian Serb fighters violating the no-fly zone Monday, and had threatened also to open Tuzla airport by force.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic had opposed opening the airport because he believed arms could be smuggled to the Muslims controlling it. But he made the concession following talks in Moscow with Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Kozyrev.

Washington was pleased. "I think the Russians are trying to further the peace process," said White House Press Secretary Dee Dee Myers. "I think they're trying to be helpful."

Senate to gauge students' reactions

Student Senate members are expected to report on reaction from students about whether to raise Charleston's bar-entry age from 19 to 21 at tonight's senate meeting.

The senate meets at 7 p.m. Wednesday in the Arcola/Tuscola Room of the Martin Luther King Jr. University Union.

Student Body President Luke Neumann said having members bring back campus feedback about the bar-entry age should give the senate enough information to formulate an opinion about the issue.

Neumann, a member of the liquor task force, said questions regarding the enforcement of a 21-year-old drinking age in the bars and ethical questions concerning religion and morality of drinking in the local taverns were all brought up at the three liquor forums.

The task force is expected to submit its recommendation on the bar-entry-age issue to the City Council by March 19. The task force meets again March 9.

At tonight's meeting, Neumann said he will address senate members and tell them how he stands on the bar-entry issue.

Senate Speaker Bobby Smith said he is not expecting any senate resolutions to be voted on at tonight's meeting.

Student faces drug possession charges

An Eastern senior who was charged with drug possession last week made another appearance in court Monday.

Kelly Willis, 22, from Murrayville, was charged with one count of possession of less than 15 grams of cocaine and one count of possession of less than 15 grams of psilocybin, a hallucinogen. Both are Class 4 felonies that carry a sentence of one to three years.

He was also charged with possession of intent to deliver between 30 and 500 grams of cannabis, a Class 3 felony that carries a sentence of two to five years.

According to court documents, Willis told police that the drugs seized in the raid were his.

Willis is free on $8,000 bond. His preliminary hearing is scheduled for 9 a.m. on Monday.

Willis was arrested Feb. 22 at his apartment at 1052 First St. by local police and members of the East Central Illinois Drug Task Force who were serving a search warrant.

Spring training fans flock to Jordan for baseball autograph

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — Who wants Michael Jordan's autograph now that he's wearing a different type of uniform? Fans, of course.

Teammates, too.

"Everyone is asking for autographs. All the players are working me to death, so at least I'm worth something," Jordan said.

He did sign for fans Tuesday, two days after they'd jammed against a fence, creating a dangerous situation for some small children in front.

After putting down his bats and a bottle of the sports drink he's paid millions to endorse, Jordan made sure there was no pushing as he started to sign. One small boy in the front was allowed to step under a rope as security personnel surrounded Jordan and kept the crowd back. It looked a bit like a president working a crowd.

"I made it aware to security that if it gets out of control, I'd leave. But being that the kids are skipping school, I thought I'd at least make it worth their while to sign a few for them," Jordan said. "I try to do as many as I can, but you can never really satisfy them all."

He signed hats, programs, baseballs, basketballs. One man even held out a $5, hoping Jordan would sign beside another famous American, Abe Lincoln.

Another fan told Jordan he needed the autograph for his grandchildren. Another said he was single and wasn't asking for his grandchildren but for himself. "How about signing for a senior citizen?" an elderly man asked.

The session complete, Jordan made it to his locker and admitted that daily press briefings on his progress were getting old and starting to wear on him.

He did say he was looking forward to Thursday's intra squad game where he might face Cy Young winner Jack McDowell.

"I think I'm well-equipped with fundamentals they have been teaching me," Jordan said. "I'm ready to see if I can excel at it or do well at it or do some of that in live action," Jordan said.

Baseball squad snowed under

The season opener for Eastern's baseball team was postponed Tuesday because of unplayable field conditions.

The Panthers were to have traveled to Bloomington, Ind., for a single game with the Hoosiers Tuesday afternoon.

The game has not yet been rescheduled.

The team may try to play today's scheduled game with Indiana State at Terre Haute, Ind., rather than here, where it was originally scheduled to be played.

With Olympics over, Harding now readies for disciplinary hearing

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — As Tonya Harding slept in late in her first day home from the Olympics, the U.S. Figure Skating Association proceeded Tuesday with plans to subject her to a disciplinary hearing next week.

A five-member USFSA panel will determine whether Harding should be kicked out of the association for her role in the Jan. 6 attack on rival Nancy Kerrigan.

The hearing will begin March 10 in Colorado Springs, Colo., said Bill Hybl, the panel's chairman.

Harding's attorneys had asked for an indefinite delay of the hearing, which previously was scheduled for March 9, but the USFSA was willing only to move it back only one day.

"They wanted more time but this was the best we could do to accommodate them," Hybl said. "We've got the world championships coming up." The panel already has decided there were reasonable grounds to believe Harding was in on or knew of the Kerrigan plot. The committee ordered a hearing be held to determine what disciplinary action, if any, should be imposed.

The most severe potential penalties are suspending her association membership or banning her from the organization for life. Either action would bar her from the World Figure Skating Championships, scheduled for March 22-27 in Chiba, Japan.

"She really wants to go to the worlds, if they let her," Harding's coach, Diane Rawlinson, said Tuesday.

The panel is to meet with USFSA attorneys on March 9 to lay the groundwork for the hearing, which could last as long as three days.

One of Harding's attorneys, Bob Weaver, would not say whether his client would attend.

"We will respond in some fashion but I can't make any comment beyond that," Weaver said.

Harding is scheduled to meet with her lawyers Wednesday.

Hybl said the USFSA wants Harding to participate. She did not take part in the earlier hearing.

"She can either appear, she can send us a videotape or she can submit a statement," Hybl said.

notified whether or not his 6.28 ranks him among the top 16 individuals nationally.

Last season, Cooper ran 6.23 and 21.13, respectively. His 55 time ranks second on Eastern's all-time list and his 200 time is the current school record.

• McAfee, a freshman, will be competing in the 400 (46.70, 47.80). He is currently undefeated in head-to-head competition at 400, and has a best so far of 49.30, which ranks seventh on Eastern's all-time list. McAfee would need to break the school record (47.87, Dan Steele, 1991) to make provisional.

• Shaffer, a junior, will compete in the mile (4:01.80, 4:07.00). Under 4:20 three times this season, Shaffer's best of 4:11.50 ranks 10th on Eastern's all-time list.

• Trentman, a senior, will compete in the high jump (7-4 1/2, 7-1). His best leap of the season, 6-10 1/4, came last Friday, and was his fourth effort over 6-9 3/4 this season. The height ranks him fifth on Eastern's all-time list. Trentman has attempted to break the school record (7-0, Mike Hamman, 1987) twice, and barely missed.

grade-point average, stand out.

"I just go all out in basketball, but, at the same time, I try hard to get good grades," the physical education major said. "I would like to be a coach or a teacher someday."

Another key ingredient to Landrus' success is his unselfishness.

"I'm not really vocal, but when the game comes, I do what we have to do to win," he said. "I'd rather give a guy a layup than me score the basket. If somebody's open, I'll pass it to them."

"Derrick is a versatile player," Samuels said. "Not only does he handle the ball well, but his perimeter shooting ability and penetration are excellent. The versatility he gives our team is an important factor for us."

Landrus has accumulated several awards, achievements and honorable mentions over the years. Some of last season's honors include being the team's best three-point shooter (40.2 percent) and No. 2 scorer with a 12.9 points-per-game average, team-leader from the free-throw line at 81.3 percent (61-for-75), third best in Eastern's 12 years as a Division I program. Landrus also led the team with 3.3 assists per game.

In high school, Landrus was the state's top Class AA scorer with a 31.2 points-per-game average. His most memorable game was a 56-point effort against Casey, still the single-game scoring record at Charleston High School.

"Derrick was simply blessed with God-given talent," Charleston coach Steve Simons said. "He does a lot of things you don't teach. Derrick was a player that was not only easy to coach, but fun to watch."

Landrus recorded 54 points in another high school contest, and his highest output as a Panther came this season versus Northeastern Illinois with 27 tallies.

"Those were big games for me, but I just like to win," Landrus said. "That is the main thing for me."

Simons added that Landrus' strong points include putting the ball in the hole and being extremely quick on the floor.

"I think Derrick has proven that he can do a lot of other things besides score," Simons said.

As far as basketball remaining with him in the future, Landrus maintains a sensible view of it.

"You never totally put (basketball) out of the picture, but it's doubtful," Landrus said. "But you can always have a hope."

Just like his idol, Michael Jordan, Landrus may also leave the game of basketball in style being remembered as an offensive threat and solid playmaker.

"He is a player that can just mesmerize you," Simons said. "It was fun coaching Derrick because you would get so involved in watching him, making it a challenge to stay focused on the game itself."

Wright

receiving radiation treatment, will not travel with the team during their final two games of the season against Wright State, according to Matt Zircher, Wright State's Sports Information Director. And her status for the Mid-Con tourney remains in question.

Elsewhere in the Mid-Con:

• Eastern's three-game winning streak, snapped in the Wright State loss, was the longest by a Lady Panther basketball team since February of 1991.

And the success of the streak greatly effected the individual performances of several Eastern players in terms of scoring increase per game.

Team scoring leader Shannon Baugh (14.9 points per game) averaged 26.3 points per game in the three-game span. Sophomore guard Tourrie Frazier (6.8 points per game) averaged 14.7 points in the stretch and Nicky Polka (9.1 points per game) averaged 12.7 points.

• And while the Lady Panthers were catching some late-season fire, racking up those three-straight victories before Saturday's loss, Youngstown State was doing the same thing.

After dropping 12-consecutive Mid-Con ball, the last place Lady Penguins (6-18, 3-13) rolled off a trio of triumphs against Valparaiso, Illinois-Chicago and Wright State — fifth, sixth and eighth place in the Mid-Con respectively.

In addition to the teams' success, junior forward Kristi Echelberry was named this weeks Mid-Con "Player of the Week" after averaging over 22 points during their winning streak.

On the surface, it would appear that it took two defeats to the ninth-place Lady Panthers to get the Lady Penguins into the gear, knowing that second loss to Eastern dropped their Mid-Con record to 0-12 at the time.

• And while on the subject of three's, Valparaiso, Eastern's opponent on Saturday, had a three-game winning streak of its own snapped by Youngstown State last Saturday.

The Lady Crusaders will attempt to get back on track at home against the Lady Panthers, who they defeated 97-86 on Jan. 29 at Lantz Gym.

Local product makes good

Playing both his high school and college basketball in Charleston has made Eastern guard Derrick Landrus something of a hometown hero.

"It's been great," the 6-foot-1-inch junior standout said. "I don't think it would be the same anywhere else."

"People are very supportive of me, and I'd like to thank everybody for that. I just go out and try to play hard for them every game."

For anyone, making the jump from the high school to collegiate ranks is, to say the least, quite an adjustment.

"I felt a little pressure coming in, but I just worked as hard as I could," Landrus said.

In fact, despite having limited playing time his freshman year, Landrus maintained a positive outlook.

Panther head coach Rick Samuels said the adjustment to college ball was "a little tough at first" for the area product.

"Things didn't go really well my freshman year, and I didn't see much playing time," Landrus said. "But I kept working hard, and when my time came, I just took advantage of it."

As a freshman, Landrus had the opportunity to play in the 1992 NCAA Tournament against Indiana — albeit a 94-55 loss.

"That was a great experience, and it's something I want to do again," said Landrus, who canned a trio of treys versus the Hoosiers.

FILE PHOTO
Junior guard Derrick Landrus has been a steady mainstay for Eastern's basketball team. Landrus is the team's second leading scorer averaging 12.9 points per game.

"It helped me build confidence right at the end of the year."

The modest Landrus said he doesn't worry much about recognition and admits his No. 1 priority is getting an education.

"A few people will remember you 10 to 15 years down the road," the 1991

Charleston High School graduate said. "I'd like to be known as a great player in Charleston and at Eastern, but the main thing is to get an education."

Emphasis on studies and basketball is what makes Landrus, holder of a 3.3

Lady Panthers aim for Mid-Con softball crown

By DAN FIELDS
Staff writer

Losing only one player from last year's squad, Eastern's softball club looks to be a serious threat to take first place in the Mid-Continent Conference championship this season.

Head coach Beth Perine is upbeat about the upcoming season, which starts this weekend at the Southern Illinois Classic, and has every reason to be.

"The keys are that we have a lot of people returning," said Perine. "We are very experienced, and I expect those (experienced) players to step up."

"A lot of juniors and seniors need to perform this year."

Two of those "experienced players" that Perine mentioned are Coli Turley and Sharna McEwan.

Turley, a senior from East Peoria, will spend most of her time on the mound this year. When she isn't pitching, Turley will probably be stationed at second base.

But with being a senior comes the leadership qualities that Perine expects out of Turley.

"I hope Coli will be a leader offensively and defensively," said Perine. "She will pitch, play second base and hit in one of the top three positions."

As the ace of the pitching staff, Perine looks to use Turley against key opponents.

"I think Coli will pitch against the best teams we will play, and she will have a real successful year on the mound," said Perine.

McEwan, a sophomore

from Queensland, Australia, seems to be the Panthers' choice to once again lead the offensive attack.

Last year, McEwan garnered All-

Mid-Continent Conference and All-Tournament team honors as a redshirt freshman. Leading the team in batting average (.389), RBIs (29) and doubles (12), Perine said McEwan is capable of posting the same numbers — if not better.

"In Sharna, we look for her to have another good year," said Perine. "She was, and will be, critical to our offense."

A newcomer that Perine expects to contribute to this year's team is Jennifer Cherveney.

A freshman from Streator, Cherveney is predicted to fill one of the slots in the outfield.

"I think Jennifer will start in left or center field," said Perine. "She has come a long way since the fall, and we hope she will contribute a great deal."

If all goes as expected, Eastern will have an excellent shot at capturing the Mid-Continent Conference Tournament. But for the first time, an added incentive will be awarded to the champion — in the form of an automatic bid to the NCAA Tournament.

Even so, Perine realizes that the road to success will be difficult.

Wright State bumps Eastern from playoffs

Before Saturday's 68-54 triumph over the Lady Panthers, it had been a tough stretch of the season for the Lady Raiders of Wright State, and one they faced without their head coach Terry Hall.

The Lady Raiders have been riding an emotional roller coaster the majority of the season since Hall, coaching in her fourth season at Wright State, was diagnosed with ovarian cancer, causing her to miss various stretches of the season.

Wright State assured itself the eighth and final spot in the Mid-Continent Conference tournament by beating Eastern last Saturday in Lantz Gym. Wright State had dropped seven of its last eight Mid-Con contests — after defeating the Lady Panthers 71-56 on Jan. 22.

Cooper, others aim for NCAA qualifying marks

Obadiah Cooper has one more chance to meet NCAA qualification in the 55 and 200-meter dashes, the two events in which he went to nationals last year.

In track, there are two qualifying marks in each event, an automatic and provisional. If an athlete makes automatic, then he or she will compete in the indoor championship meet at the Hoosier Dome in Indianapolis, Ind. March 11-12, without question. However, if the desired number of entrants, determined by the NCAA, do not make automatic, then officials go down the provisional list until the spots are filled. The number of qualifiers allowed in each event, unless more make automatic, varies from 10 to 16.

Cooper, a senior, made provisional in the 55 (6.19 automatic qualifying time, 6.28 provisional qualifying time) in January, running 6.28 seconds during a triangular meet at Lantz. In the 200 (21.08, 21.50), Cooper's best this season of 21.64 falls just shy of the provisional mark. He, along with teammates Kert McAfee, Nate Shaffer and Neal Trentman will compete in an NCAA last chance meet at Indiana University on Friday.

Cooper's sprint times are the closest to qualifying. If he does not improve in either race, Cooper will later be
